Visitors' rights were ignored

To the Editor:

I am utterly disgusted with people that use their civil rights to interfere with the civil rights of others.

The interviewers from the CIA were invited to the campus of Mary Washington College and the action of the two male students ignored the rights of the visitors.

The male students ignored my rights also. Having attended MWC for a short while, and being a student of the marvelous Mrs. Hook, I take umbrage towards students at MWC looking to embarrass the college and not take advantage of all the knowledge that is offered by the professors on that campus.

The male students had a choice. They were not forced to participate in that part of the activities for the day.

Are they not lucky to be in a country where participation is not compelled?
